Going Beyond the Conversation

The IP infrastructure of most financial services firms remains largely underutilized. When fully harnessed, it has the power to transform communications systems into platforms for new enterprise solutions and allow for greater flexibility and improved quality collaboration between off-floor specialists and traders.

Behind the Scenes

Connecting to Important “Off the Trade Floor” Resources

- Analysts - Many trade teams include dedicated analysts who collaborate directly with traders in real-time.
- Back Office Support - Subject matter experts consult with traders and middle office support teams to clarify the terms and ensure the accuracy of the deal.
- Economists - Traditionally collaborating with trading desks via hoot-n-holler systems, economists have become an integral part of the trade environment as deals have become increasingly complex.
- Portfolio Managers - Increasing market complexity has required traders and portfolio managers work more closely together. The quality of their real-time collaboration has a material impact on a firm’s investing success and reputation.
- Private Wealth Managers - These managers advise high-net-worth individuals on financial planning, investment portfolio management, estate planning, legal issues, and tax management.
- Risk and Compliance Managers - In the past, these managers typically reviewed trades after the fact; today, they are increasingly involved in real-time decision making.
